MATERIAL PROGRESS IN ENGLAND.

MATERIAL PROGRESS IN ENGLAND.

The Times publishes the following abridgment of the address by Mr. R. Giffen, president of the Economic Science and Statistics section of the British Association, on "The recent rate of material progress in England." The address was delivered at the meeting of the Association—

It has occurred to me that a suitable topic in the commercial capital of England, and at a time when the many reasons for thinking that we are making stock of what is going on in the industrial world, will be whether there has been in recent years a change in the rate of material progress in the country as compared with the period just before. There is much prima facie evidence, in the bare bones of the statistics, that the commercial wealth and the rate of increase of national prosperity may not have been so great of late years, as it was during the last few years, as in the 50 or 60 years preceding the latter date. The fact that the material facts usually appeared as a sign of general prosperity, the reverse, we find that if we go back 50 years, we shall find a much smaller amount of material facts than we find in the United Kingdom of the last few years; there appears to be an immense progress from 1666 to 1875, the rate of increase being, and since 1875 a much less progress. The rate of increase from 1666 to 1875, was 100 per cent. and from 1875 to 1895 and 1870, 41 per cent.; and between 1875 and 1888-1895, 12 per cent. only. The income-tax assessments for the last 20 years are not a perfectly good test in a question of this kind, as the assessments are made on the basis of the net income, as the aggregate wealth and prosperity of the community are concerned, though of course there can be no question of the distribution of wealth, which must have many important consequences. As respects the production of steel, it is not found to have progressed in the last 30 years, as it has in the preceding 50 years.

1855 and 1865, 63 per cent.; between 1865 and 1875, 50 per cent.; between 1875 and 1885, 20 per cent. only. The rate of growth in the last ten years has been less than in the 20 years just before. It is worth noting that the rate of increase in 1855 and 1865, 63 per cent., was between 1865 and 1875, 33 per cent.; and between 1875 and 1885, 16 per cent. only. Whatever the explanation may be, we have thus to take account of a diminution of the rate of increase in the production of pig iron, and a corresponding decrease in the production of the other products of coal. At the same time the miscellaneous mineral production of the United Kingdom has not only diminished absolutely. Agricultural production, it is also noticeable, has been, at any rate, no better, and has been, in fact, rather worse, than in the comparatively recent period a steady improvement seemed to be going on. If we take the consumption of and tobacco exports are also similar decline in the rate of increase, and, in some cases, a diminution, are at least not in contradiction with the other facts stated, although it does not support the view that there will be no further export an indefinitely continuance of a former rate of increase. Various explanations are suggested, but not only do they demand the rate of our progress, but they also explain foreign competition. There is a natural foreign competition as well as a stimulated foreign competition to be considered. Dealing first with the stimulated competition, the most obvious criticism on this alleged explanation of the recent decline in the rate of our market expansion is that the rates given by foreign Governments in recent years have not been increasing, or, at any rate, not materially increasing, so as to account for the change in question. Since the rates of increase have not increased, the conclusion seems again to be in the direction of higher tariffs. But, as an explanation of the past facts, it is impossible to urge that foreign competition has caused the decline in the rate of increase in our tariff had before, and this in consequence of the fact that the tariff had before, and this in consequence

probably be somewhat larger still for foreign competition. The fact that the sugar industry in the United States is so small that it can be increased if foreign bounties were taken away, while in many cases the amounts involved are too small to raise any question of the effect on the general industry, is a sign of the growth of the general industry of the country. Of course the extra cheapness of sugar, alleged to be due to the bounties, must have been so great an advantage to the sugar industry that it could have been maintained at the expense of £2,000,000 to £3,000,000 per annum, that the stimulus thereby given to other industries must apparently have far more than compensated any loss caused by the stimulus of the bounty to sugar and that the same remarks apply to Mutua mutandis, the same remarks apply to other foreign bounties, of which indeed the only ones that have been at all mentioned in the report are those of the United States. It does there appear to be anything in the assertion that the protectionist action of foreign Governments in recent years can have caused the check alleged to the result of the bounty on sugar, and that the same remarks may be applied to have occurred. The question of an increase of foreign competition from natural causes is more difficult. One of the great increase of the imports of foreign manufactured articles into the United Kingdom. But the increase in the last 10 years is not more than about £18,000,000, taking the average of the last 10 years, and the increase in the last 10 years—viz., from about £37,500,000 in the quinquennial period 1870-74 to £55,000,000 in the quinquennial period 1880-84, is only about £17,500,000, or £3,500,000 increased per annum. The value of the raw materials imported of such articles it is fair to say has increased only one-half, if not more, is the value of the raw material which we should have had to import in any case; so that the increase in the value of the raw materials which we have displaced by these increased imports. Even the whole of this £9,000,000 of course is not lost, only the difference between it and the sum which the capital and labour "displaced" would have been able to produce, which is possibly even a plus and not a minus difference. If we add articles "partly manufactured" no difference would be made in the value of the raw materials which we have displaced, but the value of the articles themselves would be £28,000,000 in the ten years. Such difference, it need not be said, hardly counts in the general total of the industry of the country. Further, the rate of increase of these imports growth was greater as in the last ten years, the increase in manufactured articles between 1860-64 and 1870-74 being £19,000,000—viz. from £18,000,000 to £37,000,000, or over 100 per cent. as compared with 60 per cent. only in the last ten years, and in articles partly manufactured from £17,000,000 to £26,000,000, an increase of £9,000,000 as

SIR HENRY PARKES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—As one who has the misfortune of being busy at this busy city, I was exceedingly glad to read your leader in this morning's issue, re Sir Henry Parkes's "pecuniary affairs," and so I hasten to throw out a suggestion on the strength of the motto—"That what is done is better than nothing." Now, Sir, I take it that Sir Henry's burden is our burden, and we will help him to bear it; for is it possible that any true man interested in the welfare of New South Wales would neglect his duties as the editor of Sir Henry Parkes in every way) could remain indifferent to so (yes, I say it), national duty and privilege as that of standing to a man by his venerable station, in this time of need? Sir Henry Parkes is one of those noble exceptions who has never prostituted his position of power to the spirit of self-aggrandisement.

I now propose, as your leader puts it, that the "People's gift" should be spontaneous and quick—no solicitation whatever. Let places be appointed for all the people to give their gifts to, and I doubt not that if all will give in proportion, as I have resolved in my heart to do, the sum, dear sir, of all the Australias, will raise such a sum as shall do credit to this glorious land. I am, &c.,

OCTOBER 10.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—No Englishman remembering the traditions of England, or the deeds of her heroes, would see the House last night without a feeling of shame. If the members there, and all, will look into their own hearts, I don't think there are many who can stand up before God and call themselves the Chamber who could throw a stone at Parkes.

Charity forms one consideration, another the failure of over-sanguineness in a public character, as in a business man trained to all the wily temptations of mining and land speculation—a political economist is particularly liable to such temptation. I could cite you scores of such examples in English public men, but will only instance Cobden. Everybody knows, or ought to know, that he was a very corrupt politician, and yet that once launched in politics he lived like a saint, and that once he had thrown his private affairs suffered, and he was on the verge of bankruptcy. Yet, when he made a clean breast of his position to his friends in Manchester, a subscription was raised of $46,000 by less than two hundred subscribers, and he never knew the names of his benefactors! Surely, Sydney will be worthy of its ancestry?

Yours truly,

I AM, &c., CHIMBORAZO.

The National Liberal is at the back of Northumberland-avenue, and one of its great attractions is its terrace on the top of the hill. The terrace is a fine promenade, and the people roll out upon the terrace to smoke over their coffee, and are all agreed that it is pleasanter than the terrace of the House of Commons itself. The club has many other unique advantages, and I have heard of several inkhorn Conservative politicians being converted to Liberalism by the attractions of the club. Two of these weak-kneed ones are up for election. London was always famous for its clubs. It is rapidly becoming a city of clubs and hotels. The Constitution close by the National Liberal is most interesting and convenient. The National Liberal Club promised to be a rival of the best political institutions of its class, and it is Conservative in principle. It will celebrate its foundation by a dinner at the St. Stephen's to-night. Mr. Ashmead Bartlett will preside at the banquet. The Carlton has been during its closing up a very fine place. The new management have made the unhappy discovery that the drainage of both their houses is in a seriously defective condition. This is an awkward revelation at the moment when scarlet fever has broken out here and there in the metropolis, and is causing the death of many children.

While I am writing, these clearing lines the much-needed rain is coming down in torrents. We have had welcome showers during the past few days, with deinfatuation at knowing the Ambassador to be so near at hand, and the hope of being honoured by a visit to the neighbourhood. The Baron notified M. Fleurens of the circumstance, adding, that "as no secretary had accompanied him, he could not answer the letter, but had sent a messenger to the Ambassador to inform him of the visit, and on the pretended visit, this exaggerated rumour spreads every possibility in the maintenance of his notoriety.

Being in all ways ambitious of imitating the First Minister, who recently created this renowned Milord de Talleyrand, M. de Bonal, and believed in the power of prediction, General Bonalanger has had his fate foretold on two occasions. About six weeks before the downfall of the Goblet Cabinet, of which he was then, as a member, a friend of his, having heard of the fortune-telling powers of a certain Madame a 13-knot breeze brings to the people of Sydney.

 There is one town, however, in Victoria where the breeze is not so strong, and that is Sandhurst. It is a gold-producing town where, when on an ounce of gold worth £4 is brought to the surface or £4 10s., the people congratulate each other on the discovery of the district. Whether you would study dust or men, you must go to a diggings. Men are more numerous, the air is more bracing, and considering others you consider the other. The Sandhurst breeze runs mostly north and south. The result of the breeze is that the great heaps of tailings or pulverised quartz-rock from which the gold has been extracted run north and south also. It will be readily understood, then, even by those who never saw a gold mine, that the Sandhurst monotony of the mountains and of a quartz-mill in the distance, that when a north wind, sufficiently stiff to shift some of the lighter particles, comes gasconading along the sand-heaps, the people living just to the south are disposed to complain of dust. So, when the air's motion is in a contrary direction, those fortunate enough to have quiet weather are pardoned for thinking that life would be none the worse if the breeze did not come so persistently from the Antarctic Circle.
 Sandhurst men, with both eyebrows suitably inflamed, will tell a Melbourne visitor that ophthalmia is more common here, a touching sight. He explains to him the reason, and, instead of making a dramatic appeal, as he might, he suggests, to endeavour to mislead him—that before the diggings broke out, over 80 years ago, the sandy blight was said to be prevalent, but that the quartz tailings had taken it all away. Perhaps you've been at a diggings—have had a chat, perhaps,
 with a miner of the country, and you have been contemptuously left 50 years only, and who want the advance of a "dover" only, just to clean out the old shaft, and start breaking stone on the reef, a lode lying down strong, with a fine foot wall, and good prospects front and back? Wonderful, isn't it?
 Wonderful to think of the serious, matter-of-fact men of yesterday, so anxious to get the gold out of the earth, and treasure it marvellously to witness the credulity of the staff which causes their eyes to bulge and their little molasses of yesterday to appear dark to-day.
 Everything, it is said, has a use in the world.
 I am sure. Granted. I am sure. I have discovered a use of dust remains still unknown. This is odd, defect in question. I am, &c.,

THOMAS MOORE.

Current political gossip describes the Marquis of Salisbury as in a very depressed state of mind with regard to the future political outlook. The nobility are generally in health and despondent in mood, and his mental depression has been increased by the persistent refusal of the Marquis of Hartington to enter his Cabinet. It is even rumoured that he has threatened to retire from public life altogether if Lord Hartington does not reconsider his decision before the commencement of the next session of Parliament. Lord Harewood is reported to have offered to resign to an arrangement between himself and the Conservative Government; and it is considered most likely that before next Christmas—if the inferences are correct—which were drawn from his recent speech—we may find him actively associated with the Ministerial programme.

The reason to be lamented from the shocking calamity at Exeter—London is flooded with refugees—the theatre has been furnished with an iron drop scene, the disaster might have been, if not averted, at all events mitigated in its direful effects for the flames would not so easily have been prevented from reaching the gallery.

France the iron drop scene was used, and the French complicity. It has to be worked under official inspection at intervals, and the manager is required to use once or twice during the course of each performance.

So far as we know, iron drop-scenes have not yet been introduced into English theatres, and perhaps never will be, owing to the unsatisfactory condition as regards exits and the expense involved.

The disaster at Exeter has led to the Lord Chamberlain making a personal inspection of the London theatres. Of late years the Leeds Chamberlain have been more particular in their requirements for the public safety.

Ket Low's theatres are still very deficient in their arrangements, and in the provinces the state of things is ten times worse.

The Agents-General have not finished their voyage though Sir Dillon Bell and Sir Arthur Blythe have returned to town. Sir Paul Samuel is still at Sandgate but very soon comes up to London to attend to important business.

THE TRAN TIME-TABLES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

"Sir—I see in your article, dated October 2d last instant the "New Time-table," you make special mention of the Glebe Point and Forest Lodge Lines. As officers had been in that neighbourhood for the past few weeks, we kindly allow me to state my experience. On Friday, 29th, I was 10.5 a.m. train from Glebe Point did not start at all. As I was obliged to be late for a certain time, I was compelled to take a cab. Saturday, August 6, 7, the p.m. train from the terminus to Glebe Point was not started at all. I was therefore obliged to nearly half an hour for the next Wednesday, September 10, the p.m. train from terminus to Glebe Point did not start. King-street until nearly 8 o'clock, the guard exclaimed "The train is late." I was obliged to wait for 15 minutes by your report that the authorities have started time-table with similar tactics. Is this called economic mismanagement? Surely no time-table at all, but a complete stoppage of the line. I am sure that the public would do nearly as well as this. Enclosing my card,

METROPOLITAN QUARTER SESSIONS.

[illegible]

Flurence Hall summoned her husband, William Hall, for maintenance. An order was granted for £2 weekly for 12 months. Robert Cole was summoned by John Wigginton for assault. The parties were next door neighbours, and a difference arose in consequence, as it was alleged, of defendant and his mother-in-law having damaged plaintiff's garden with a rake. Plaintiff went to interview defendant's wife about the matter, when defendant pushed him away and struck him. Defendant was fined 10s. and costs, or 21 days. Joseph White was summoned by Harriet Eaton for obscene language, and was fined 40s. and 14 ds. 10d. costs, or 14 days.

SHOOTING AT A CHINAMAN.

At the Water Police Court yesterday, before Mr. G. W. Addison, S.M., a youth named Herbert Hillyer, on remand was charged with shooting at one Ah Coy, with intent to do him grievous bodily harm. Senior-constable Brennan deposed that, about 7 p.m. on the 8th instant, the prisoner was brought to the Woolwich police station by Ah Coy and two other Chinamen; Ah Coy charged the accused with shooting at him with intent to do him grievous bodily harm; the prisoner said he did not discharge the shot.

At Cus, a Chinese, who was with the prosecutor when he told the boys to leave off firing, gave corroborative evidence that he was struck on the wrist by one of the shots from the gun. This was the first time the accused was called in evidence for the defence at the prosecution. For the defence, the accused made a statement of the substance of which was that he did not fire at the Chinamen at all; he and his companions were near the Chinamen's gardens firing at an empty powder flask. He also stated that the Celestials set upon and ill-used him because they had been told that he was a spy.

A number of witnesses having been heard in defence, the accused was committed for trial at the next Court of Quarter Sessions, bail being allowed, himself in £60, and two sureties of £30 each.

We have only to look into the country-district of North Wales, and what do we find? Why, the area is a waste of land, which has been purchased by the people as far back as 60 years ago, and is now left uncultivated, and comparatively uncrowded. In the Port Macquarie district this is a great drawback to the settlement of the tract, and the Government block there is a waste of land, which has been purchased, and which has been left in the above-mentioned state. It is impossible to tell who or where the owners really are, but it is thought they reside beyond the colony. We are told that the Government are about to purchase the tract, and to give it to the State, and, by investing a claim in the land, to give the Government the opportunity of selling the land to the people, and that, if the Government are not profitable to the various tenants in which such mischievous cases occur.

With three additional cases, viz., a property case, a tax case, and a case of the Government, the Treasury of this beautiful colony will be largely increased, and the people will, after a time, be able to see more to the advantage in a proprietary sense, a credit to the nobility, and all persons

There are those who have a peculiar faculty

We publish in another column a report of the inaugural address delivered by Mr. R. GIFFEN, President of the section of the British Association devoted to Economic Science and Statistics. The subject was "The recent Rate of Material Progress in England." The chief points of the address went to the effect that while there had been a visible decrease in the rate of material growth of the country during the last ten years, there had been as distinct an increase in the general prosperity of the people; and that though there had been a decline in the mineral production, in textile industries and in other staple manufacture, there had been also an expansion of miscellaneous production and a great change in the direction of industry. In support of this Mr. GIFFEN shows that while there has been an increase in population there has been no increase in pauperism; that there has been a steady increase in Savings Banks deposits and in depositors, and that all the signs go to show an easier condition of life among the labouring classes. This being so, there can only be one deduction, namely, that the decline in the rate of material growth, as commonly shown by figures, is more or less fallacious. There cannot be any disastrous depression in trade while wealth is being more evenly distributed and assessments on income are increasing. The usual plan is to look at the statistics concerning staple production and consumption at the present time, and compare them with those of previous periods. Coal, iron, and other mineral industries have not apparently flourished during the last ten years as in the twenty or thirty years previously. The consumption of tea, sugar, and spirits has declined, and agriculture has remained at least stationary. The figures are conclusive enough at first sight, but, when other facts are brought to bear, and other conditions are investigated, there is scarcely ground for the assertion so often made that the decline is owing entirely to the stimulus given to foreign competition by high protective tariffs and duties. It has been such a common thing to base all calculations upon old conditions and then to turn every thing over for discussion of the question of tariffs that reasons are not usually sought for elsewhere. There is, however, a method that is reasonable and logical in Mr. GIFFEN's remarks that they cannot easily be gainsaid.

It is natural that there should be a disturbance in the course of trade and a check to progress from time to time. Not only is one country affected by the policy of another but the industries of a nation change in their importance, and what is dominant in trade to-day gives place to something else to-morrow, while the chances are that with the progress of invention and the development of science the changes will be greater still in the future. A transition period has come to England. The coal and iron industries no longer rule commerce to such an extent that any fluctuation in their expansion means a movement toward national ruin. The decrease has come, yet in spite of the pessimistic views of those who quoted figures sufficient to crush out commercial hope, the general prosperity seems afforded to no extraordinary degree. Cotton at one time ruled the Eastern and Southern States of the American Union, while gold governed the West. No longer is this the case. These natural developments of the country only ruled until there came, with the advance of settlement and industry, great variations in the products of manufacture. Australia received a wonderful impetus from the gold development, but new forms of industry took its place when it declined. England at one time, as Mr. GIFFEN points out, was dependent on

The dimensions of these pieces of armour-plate are:—Length, 19ft. 4in.; width, 9ft. 4in.; thickness, 1ft. 4in. The total weight of each shield is 3 tons 14cwt. The guns and armour-plate are of the latest type and were supplied by the well-known firm of Sir William Armstrong and Co., Elswick, Newcastle-on-Tyne. The order for these stores was sent home in 1885. Twelve 6-inch guns and a quantity of shot and shell are expected to arrive in Sydney shortly.

Transcriptions from various Chinese journals show that the Commissioner has been well received in the country in expression of satisfaction with respect to Australian receptions, as they were reported to have been whilst in the colonies. They speak in terms of gratification and thankfulness for the manner in which their advent was recognised on all hands—by the authorities, the parliamentary, civic, and social dignitaries, and the press. They have been assailed, however, by a lengthened and audacious inquiry on the part of the representative of the Sydney Morning Herald, that the objects of the Commissioner's visit were dual. Ostensibly they sought to examine the late the Hon. Gordon's condition of their fellow-countrymen here; but

SPEAKING of the Captain Cook relics which have been secured for the New South Wales Government, our London correspondent says, writing on September 9:- "Sir Saul Samuel has secured for the New South Wales Government the whole of the interesting collection of Captain Cook's relics which were on view at the late Colonial and Indian Exhibition. Some of them he has sold to your country, others have been presented as a gift. Your Agent-General has also obtained conclusive evidence in such cases that the relics were the genuine property of Captain Cook. Many of them have been in the possession of the captain's family ever since his death, while others whose authenticity is well vouchsafed, have been brought from the Pacific. Amongst the latter are a number of the knives and weapons of different descriptions, cooking utensils and various objects of local interest, such as a feather cloak, which was thrown over Captain Cook's shoulders by King Kalanipoua, of Hawaii, on January 24, 1779, when Cook was at the height of roval favour, and believed to be a divinity, and a feather helmet. There is also Cook's dress sword or hanger, his Court shoe buckles, and a waistcoat button, all embroidered by his wife, in which it was hoped would secure a visit to his country, but which was turned from his last voyage. The collection, by the way, includes some New Zealand curiosities, and some of them were presented to the captain by a Maori chief, who gave him a Bible which he was accustomed to consult in his service during his voyage to the Pacific."
